Sam 7

by

Richard Hubert Francis

"Sam 7" is a gripping science fiction novel by Richard Hubert Francis Cox. The story begins with a typical rush hour in London, which is suddenly disrupted by the deafening roar of jet engines as a fully loaded plane crashes onto the crowded platforms of Victoria Station. The impact kills scores of people and traps others beneath the wreckage. London's emergency services are stretched to their limits as they face the city's worst disaster since the Blitz.

The novel is a tense and riveting thriller that explores the desperate attempts to save lives amidst the chaos, while also dealing with the threat of terrorists loose on the streets of London. It's a highly readable and absorbing story that keeps you on the edge of your seat.
